ARTICLE 2. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

Section 2.1. Background.

Host states have not typically permitted out-of-state trust institutions to engage in a trust business in the host state or to conduct trust activities in the host state except for the following:

- (a) On a reciprocal basis, usually requiring the out-of-state trust institution to obtain authority to act as a fiduciary in the host state on a particular account from the host state supervisor; and
- (b) Marketing and soliciting in the host state.

In fact, some host state statutes and regulations as interpreted traditionally did not permit either of the above activities by out-of-state trust institutions.

In 1994, Congress acted on interstate banking, by adopting the Riegle-Neal Interstate Banking and Branching Efficiency Act of 1994. In doing so, Congress opened the door for national banks to operate branches on a nationwide basis.

CSBS responded with recommended statutory options and eventually facilitated unanimous acceptance of the Nationwide Cooperative Agreement for interstate banking and branching in 1997. The cumulative effect of the Nationwide Cooperative Agreement has been extremely positive for state banking institutions and state supervisory agencies alike. CSBS and the state trust supervisors agree that similar coordinated supervision of multi-state trust institutions is an important objective as well.

In March 1997, the CSBS Multistate Trust Institutions Project Working Group provided CSBS members with Statutory Options for Multistate Trust Activities. These options were designed to assist states in their efforts to enact legislation to maintain competitive, responsive, safe and sound trust services for the citizens of their states. To achieve these goals, the states were also encouraged to enter into cooperative agreements tailored to the unique corporate structure and business strategy of the multi-state trust institutions involved.

Since the publishing of the Statutory Options for Multistate Trust Activities, many states have adopted legislation based on, or incorporating portions of, those options and have accordingly permitting multistate trust institutions to operate in those host states on a broader basis. Other states have modified their laws in other ways to permit more interstate trust activity. Consequently, the historical pattern has changed so that while some states continue to prohibit any trust activity in that state by an out-of-state trust institution, virtually all states now permit one or more of the following activities:

- (a) Reciprocal interstate trust activity;
- (b) Marketing and soliciting of trust business by out-of state institutions in the host state, but without an office in the host state;
- (c) Any trust activity in the host state as long as it does not constitute "doing a trust business" as defined by host state law;
- (d) Operating one or more representative trust offices in the host state; and
- (e) Operating one or more trust offices in a host state.

Section 2.2. Purpose and Intent.

- (a) The purposes of this Agreement are to promote a comprehensive nationwide system to supervise and examine multi-state trust institutions cooperatively among the states; to foster effective coordination and communication among the parties to the Agreement; to avoid unnecessary regulatory duplication and to facilitate the process of supervision and examination with the least regulatory burden to multi-state trust institutions; and to enhance responsiveness to local needs and interests.
- (b) It is not the intent of this Agreement to determine what activities a multi-state trust institution may conduct in a host state, with or without licensing or registration, or to otherwise modify either home state or host state law. Rather it is the intent of this Agreement to provide an allocation of supervisory responsibility and activity between the host state supervisor and the home state supervisor with respect to multi-state trust institutions permitted by the host state to engage in a trust business or conduct any other trust activities in the host state.
- (c) Nothing in this Agreement is intended to govern or affect the trust activities of an out-of-state bank at a branch located in the host state.

Section 2.4. Responsibilities.

The parties recognize that the home state supervisor is the primary regulator and will act as the single point of supervisory contact. The home state supervisor is primarily responsible for supervising its multi-state trust institutions, including offices that may be established in various host states. In addition, the parties recognize that host state supervisors have a legitimate interest in monitoring the safety and soundness of multi-state trust institutions that operate offices or otherwise conduct trust activities in their states and in assuring those facilities and activities are operated in compliance with host state law.

Overall, the parties will cooperate to assure that each of their material interests, authorities and responsibilities is fulfilled.

ARTICLE 3. INFORMATION SHARING

Section 3.1. Request for Information.

A state supervisor may at any time request from another state supervisor, supervisory information regarding a state chartered multi-state trust institution doing business in both states. The request shall be made in writing by the state supervisor or the supervisor's designee.

A request by a state supervisor should be reasonably specific as to the documents or information sought. The state supervisor may request items relating to a particular event, such as a specific examination report, or may make a standing request for all items of a particular nature or relating to a specific multi-state trust institution.

The state supervisor shall limit its use of information obtained under this Agreement to purposes directly related to its supervisory authority.

When a federal or other state regulatory agency requests information from a host state, the host state should refer the request for information to the home state.

Section 3.2. Providing Information.

The state supervisor shall comply with a request for supervisory information within a reasonable time to the fullest extent permitted by state law. Supervisory information protected by federal law shall not be provided until the permission of the appropriate federal bank regulatory agency is obtained, following appropriate federal disclosure procedures.

Section 3.3. Confidentiality.

Supervisory information shared under this Agreement shall be presumed to be confidential unless otherwise specified by the originating authority. To the fullest extent permitted by law, the parties will treat information obtained under this Agreement with the same degree of confidentiality that applies to the information in the hands of the originating authority.

Supervisory information shared under this Agreement remains the property of the originating authority and shall not be further disclosed by the recipient without the written permission of the originating authority, except as otherwise required by applicable law or order of a court of competent jurisdiction. Supervisory information obtained under this Agreement should be returned or destroyed.

Section 3.4. Subpoenas.

As soon as reasonably practicable after receipt of a subpoena or other legal process by any court, legislative body or governmental agency, or any request from another person or entity not a party to this Agreement seeking disclosure of supervisory information supplied by the originating authority, and before disclosing any supervisory information, a state supervisor shall notify the originating authority so that the originating authority may have an opportunity to challenge the release of the information. Home state and host state supervisors shall cooperate in the preparation of any memoranda, request for protective order, or pleadings deemed desirable by the originating authority to protect the confidentiality of supervisory information.

ARTICLE 4. RESPONSIBILITY FOR EXAMINATION

Section 4.1. Role of Home State Supervisors.

To promote a single point of contact, the home state supervisor shall be responsible for examining its multi-state trust institutions for safety and soundness and compliance with applicable laws, including coordination with the host state supervisors, the appropriate federal bank regulatory agency, if applicable, and trust company management. Subject to available examiner resources, the home state supervisor and host state supervisor may agree to use host state examiners in trust examinations of multi-state trust institutions.

The home state supervisor shall give reasonable notice to each host state supervisor of the timing and scope of an upcoming multi-state trust institution examination.

The home state supervisor should consult with and, if appropriate, use host state examiners to examine for compliance with applicable host state laws, including but not limited to trust, estate, probate and consumer protection laws.

The home state supervisor shall cooperate with the host state supervisor in designating the examiner-in-charge of a multi-state trust institution trust examination. If the home state supervisor participates in an examination program with the federal bank regulatory agencies, the examiner-in-charge may be an examiner employed and selected by a federal bank regulatory agency. The examiner-in-charge shall designate the examination responsibilities of each examiner involved in the examination. Each examiner involved in an examination shall perform the responsibilities designated and promptly report the findings to the examiner-in-charge in the form requested, together with supporting work papers. The designated examiner-in-charge shall rely on the guidance of the participating state supervisors in applying applicable laws to branches or offices in their state.

The host state supervisors may keep copies of examination findings and supporting work papers they create while participating in the home state supervisor's examination.

A host state supervisor shall advise the home state supervisor whenever the host state supervisor has reasonable cause to believe an examination of an office of a multi-state trust institution is necessary due to an emergency or otherwise required by host state law. If the home state supervisor is unable or unwilling to undertake the examination in a reasonable time, the host state supervisor may conduct the examination. A host state supervisor who conducts an examination under this provision shall observe the provisions of this Agreement otherwise governing a home state supervisor conducting an examination.

Section 4.3. Planning and Scheduling.

Each home state supervisor, in consultation with host state supervisors and the appropriate federal bank regulatory agency, if applicable, shall schedule its regular examinations of multi-state trust institutions. Each home state supervisor shall promptly furnish its schedule for examinations to each relevant host state supervisor together with the home state supervisor's anticipated request for host state supervisor's assistance in conducting the examinations.

Section 4.4. Efficient Use of State Resources.

If the home state supervisor and host state supervisor(s) agree to jointly conduct an examination of a multi-state trust institution in order to facilitate efficiencies in the examination process, and to reduce regulatory burden, the supervisors may enter into separate bilateral agreements governing the sharing of resources and compensation for services rendered to the extent permitted by the laws of their respective jurisdictions.

ARTICLE 5. ENFORCEMENT ACTIONS

Section 5.1. Home State Notification and Action.

The home state supervisor shall be primarily responsible for initiating trust enforcement actions against a multi-state trust institution. The home state supervisor shall notify all host state supervisors immediately of any enforcement action, formal or informal, taken against a multi-state trust institution. If reasonably practicable, notification by the home state supervisor will be given in advance of the enforcement action. Enforcement actions to address violations of host state laws where possible shall be taken jointly by home state and host state supervisors.

Copies of the applications/notifications will be provided to host state supervisors upon request.

When host state law requires receipt or approval by the host state supervisor of an application for a license or registration of an office of a multi-state trust institution, the host state supervisor will use and rely on the application/notification filed by the multi-state institution with the home state supervisor, to the extent reasonably possible. The host state supervisor will require the multi-state trust institution to file only such additional information as it may require to act on the application/notification under host state law.

ARTICLE 8. COMPLAINTS

Section 8.1. Responsibilities.

The home state supervisor and the host state supervisor will agree as to which agency shall have the primary responsibility for the processing and resolution of consumer complaints filed against multi-state trust institutions by residents of their respective states.
